The entire purpose of the education system revolves around the learning and gathering knowledge with the best of outcomes. Learning and teaching process for a meaningful knowledge and understanding depends on the structure of curriculum, which any institute designs for its degree, diploma or certificate course. With the view of National Education Policy (NEP) 2020, curriculum designing is also facing a radical transformation in terms of making a particular discipline extended to the other disciplines. In other words, instead of traditional sense of a particular discipline limited to its own boundary of concepts, theories and practical applications, now require to be designed in an extended manner to be interconnected and exploring its implications with reference to the society, community and nation.

Learning now has become digital and computer-based, following the demands of the world and the growing competition in the education field. With the massive rise in the number of internet users and the number of digital devices, the faculty members have to digitize the course content and adapt the digital pedagogical tools. NEP 2020 also emphasizes the use of digital tools for teaching-learning and the pre-decided learning outcome of the courses. To ensure the learning outcome of learners, it is necessary to provide appropriate weightage to the practical applications in the curriculum. Besides, NEP also focus to include Indian Knowledge system in the curricula to inspire the Indian learners in a more effective manner. Thus, the curricula of the various programs offered by the higher education institutions must be revised to include the soul of NEP 2020 and the teachers must be updated accordingly.
